Eight Men and Four Women Will Hear Evidence Against Suspect

MEDFORD CITY, Calif., Oct. 3. — The jury was sworn in late today that will try William A. Hawthorne, the suspected baker and laborer, charged with the poisoning of

Attorney Franklin A. Swart immediately began this investigation and his statement of how the state intended to show Higginower guilty of first degree murder. He had detailed for a half hour the chain of circumstances to said would prove the defendant guilty at the state's Superior Court Judge H. Buck

Almost two full days were taken with the selection of a jury. Since the prosecution had declared itself satisfied with the evidence in the box, but many men came and went before the defense was convinced that a fair-minded jury had been obtained.

The selection of the jury took over two prominent men, by making suggestions to his attorneys. His face was sallow after a sleepless night and he evinced anxiety.

Heard at San Francisco a letter on August 3. It demanded the payment of $4,000 for the ransom of the priest. The letter was signed "John" and in a half hour, in the writer's absence, it said poisonous gases would overwhelm the priest in case of treachery.

The letter was written on a typewriter. The defendant was charged with the use of a typewriter, stating his writing on the letter was in his own handwriting.

"On the following day August 4, 1935, the defendant was arrested frequently with his attorneys, and offered many suggestions for the transportation of innocent jurors. Each day the three judges passed upon his guilt or innocence very closely scrutinized by him.

A number of side issues have shared public interest with Highgate's case was the report of his disappearance.

Went out and searched the whole coast side without trace. The search was continued for several days.

On July 11 this defendant was seen coming from the direction of a certain spot where afterward the body was found buried. He inquired whether he could get a lift from there. He got a ride and rode away.

Six days after the priest's disappearance, on the 5th of August, a reward was offered for the return of the priest's body. On the 14th of the same day the body of the defendant was seen coming away from the spot where the body was Giovanni Bianchi, his husband, does not know where she is, he told District Attorney Swart although "She may have gone to Italy." Bianchi was absent from home for a few hours two weeks ago. When he returned his wife was gone. He had taken their small child, the husband related. It has been learned Mrs. Bianchi had $2,200 at the time of her disappearance and the source of this money has not been disclosed, the district attorney said.

ward. On the same night Hightower went to the archbishop's office in San Francisco. There was a newspaper man present.

Hightower said: "I wanted to see the archbishop. I have a clue to the whereabouts of Father Healin."

"The archbishop was eating," Hightower told the newspaper man that the location of the body was within ten miles of him. He said he did not want anything to do with the police, because there was nothing connecting with it. He said his informant was a girl.

Hightower said the girl had told the priest. The girl said she had married the Greek with her and the Greek told her he can be excommunicated if she had married something, but she said that it was because it was caused by a man having affairs.

"I thought then and she believed the priest was carrying her to the church," she said.

The newspaper told, that the power to the San Francisco Examiner whose five editor called up the

A party was organized by the newspapermen and writer, and a considerable distance from the beach. The party consisted of Salda Beach, Hawthorne, reading the way.

"They came to a rocky sign where I got up the road from where I was sitting. They were on a considerable distance from the cliff. The defendant led the party in the darkness through the dunes to a spot where the body was found."

"The witness said that acting on a tip from the fish man, he had seen Albert Del Bonis, an official statement was available today. Del Bonis had been the shooting."

"Information obtained from official sources indicated that additional details of the shooting were recounted by the boy at the hearing this morning in which he admitted that he and his father were members of a hunting party at the time the hunting preserve on the Malibu was shot."

According to the boy's reported story he and his father became separated from the party and were overtaken by Communist who ordered

The next day to the vicinity of the airplane sign and had located the spot where the body was buried. He had located the spot by seeing a mound of burials in the sand. The burial was in a hole about 10 feet deep.

"We will prove that his last name was not that spot, an unmarked, unlabelled, extending one-quarter mile in width and miles in length; that this bluff or breaking off place was a number of places where the body has been covered, immediately opposite the airplane sign; that the defendant led the party in the darkness; that the party was led over them on the rocks. As the game ended, he hid his car to drive away and the boy, dressed in a suit, was taken and was discharged, the car run into a bank and scowped, and Farnside was found to be dead. "He is dead and will be no more," the lad declared, his father said. They then returned to the spot, shooting and later went home, the boy, declaring Victor and Bono today denied the lad's story.

Two brothers of the accused man, Rudolph and Caesar DeBonn, have resided in the Madera district for years. The record of Bono has a wife and five children.

PROBATION SYSTEM

Judge Conley's warning that there will be some sort of a concerted attack possibly made on the probation system is one that should be carefully noted. It must be noted both in reference to a political defense of the probation system and a careful checking up of the facts about the operation of the system and those under whose care its execution is entrusted.

If the spirit of this law is fulfilled, declares Judge Conley, it constitutes an admirable advance in California criminal procedure. We could go farther and say that the execution of the law, on the whole, constitutes an advance.

But there should be no indifference to the exceptions that are taken to the operation of the law. The character of the probation officers of California, their dependability, their calmness of judgment, should be just as highly regarded as that of our judges. The exceptions that are noted to the proper operation of the law should not be considered any reason for departing from the probation system. They should be accepted as a warning that the law is not always carried out in its spirit, and that caution must continually be had in the enforcement of this law, just as of any other law.

Laws, like rules of all sorts, are efforts of society to frame shortcuts to decisions. In theory, all courts should be courts of equity, applying to delinquents the fundamental principles of ethical conduct. In practice, any such procedure would be impossible. We must to some extent act according to precedent. This has led, in the course of history, to the establishment of a great body of law and of procedure, which in large part works to advantage, and to some extent to injustice.

The establishment of the probation system is an attempt to modify the general application of law to the particular individual. It is not merely an effort at mercy—it is a procedure to secure a more general establishment of justice. It attempts not merely to reform the individual, but to increase the protection afforded by the state to the innocent, but reducing those characteristically criminal elements of the community by preventive treatment. The testimony of observers is that both purposes are being accomplished—that the courts are permitted to function to abate the incidental harshness of the law and that the total amount of permanent depravity is being lessened. For this credit the probation system should be honored. And every sort of criticism of it should be carefully judged in the light of facts offered by careful observers.

NO NEED OF IT

Seven district judges in Texas have joined in expressing their opinion of the activities of the so-called Ku Klux Klan.

This is a further evidence of the healthy state of public opinion in that part of the country which might be assumed to be most sympathetic to the memories of the original K. K. K., in commemoration of which the present organization claims to be operating.

The South, which faces the most difficult race problem that is known in the United States, finds no need of the illicit proceedings of the midnight society. It finds that the evils of a privately set-up institution to enact public justice far outweigh any possible good.

We are glad that the South is leading in its disavowal of the Ku Klux Klan. This is a warrant that the attempt of the Klan to carry its light fear operations into the North and the West will be promptly terminated.

We don't need to deny that differences among men present problems that call for thought as well as for forbearance. "Not such service does the time require."

JUSTIFY YOUR WORK

We have had far too much mutual recrimination between sections of society whose business it has been to contribute each its share to the "service" of society.

We can not be surprised. It is an evidence of the keenness of competition between sections of humanity set off apart from each other by the necessary division of labor.

But if we are to avoid serious interclass struggles, we must actively work to restore to every part of humanity an understanding of the service that is being done by every other class. We shall have to promote means of interclass "advertising." And the class that can not justify its existence in this interclass show-down, must expect to go out of existence.

No, while occasionally we feel impatient with the snobbery of class consciousness, let us welcome that sort of class criticism that demands to know what the other fellow is doing for society. It is a question that we all have a right to ask. If we ask it in the right spirit.

The speaker at the session of the American Bankers' association yesterday who talked of the bankers justifying themselves to business and to labor, had just a glimmering of the truth.

The popular impression of the banker these days, and for many days past, has been of a leech on society, who reaps where he has not sown. A popular mental picture of a banker is of a person that takes some one's else money for nothing, and lends it out again at exorbitant interest; who makes use of his confidential relationship with the public for his own private speculative advantage; who has awake nights to figure out a way to corner the money and the credit of his fellow men, to keep them in a perpetual fiscal slavery.

And the danger of these thoughts is that they have a dangerous verisimilitude. They are convincing because of their nearness to the truth, not because they are truthful. They are like the picture of a man reflected from a convex mirror, with the stomach distorted, the head and legs and feet reduced to a disappearing minimum.

The banker, ever since the days of the money lenders of Rome and the three-balled clerks of the Florentine Medici have done a service to the world. But they have had to fight for a chance to render that service. And they have not always fought fairly. Oftentimes they have seized their opportunities to be arrogant. And they have shared the frailties of others of the human race. They have deceived. They have dissipated. They have defrauded.

Yet, above all these human frailties, the banking profession has survived and has grown because they have performed a service, because they have given something to human society that society can not and should not get along without.

There is still much to be done by the banking profession, and by the newspaper profession and by the business men and by the farmers and the artisans and the doctors and the lawyers to "justify" their being.

Since we are taking the bankers as a text, we will apply these opinions to them where they should apply to all.

The bankers are still known too much by their manners, rather than by their service. People think of bankers as traveling to national conventions in parlor cars, instead of thinking of them as operating safeguards for the money and the credit of communities.

People think of bankers as giving too small credits on too large securities at rates of interest which borrowers fear they can not earn at a profit; instead of thinking of them as the men who risk their own earnings in a business that shall offer to the town a means into which men may safely invest their funds, for the sake of upbuilding the industries of others who have skill and faith, but lack capital.

The bankers have to "sell" themselves into the friendly understanding of all of their fellow citizens, instead of only part of them, as is now the fact.

And we all of us, in our separate stations, must justify our existence. We must do it through the organizations that express our businesses. No one banker, no one physician, no one merchant can do this. But organizations of bankers, or merchants and of craftsmen of all sorts are justified in their organization by their representation to the rest of us of the work that the craft does.

BEANS AND DOUGHNUTS

An organization of restaurant men is singing the praise of the renaissance bean.

Beans and doughnuts, we are told, were equally made respectable by the Great War. Beans and doughnuts had fallen into disrepute. The war put them again on a plane of social acceptance.

Let us blame everything we can on the war, as well as praise it for all it is worth. Let us shrug our shoulders and murmur "C'est la guerre" when we talk of politics and religion, eugenics or the high price of happiness. But let's be a little more discriminating when we consider beans, and doughnuts.

Especially beans. Be as poetical as we may about beans, there is a whole life service of practicality about them. If we don't understand what is the practical side of beans, we will not get anywhere writing sonnets about them.

For beans, to be appreciated, must be treated with respect. It took the war to restore them to respectable treatment. The respectable treatment preceded the respectable consideration. And the respectable consideration will soon disappear if the treatment is not accorded.

Let the restaurant men beware of treating the bean or the doughnut or the pie as a fashion. It is something much more. It is an evidence of taste. The bean that is prepared to satisfy good taste will last forever. And the bean that is regarded as a routine procedure, a standby, something that goes regularly with the menus, will soon be a mockery and a curse.

It is the same with pie. Pie is "popular" if it is treated as a work of art. The cook or the baker that rises to each new sun with a prayer for strength to make better and more toothsome pies, has no need to fear changing fashions in pastry. They are as perpetually beautiful as the rosy dawn or the delicate flay of a western breeze. But the cook that is indifferent to the making of the pie, who has no sprightliness of thought in stirring the crust or in measuring the milk and sugar and spices into the interstices thereof, who is not sure of temperatures, who has not a "feel" about the time that a confection should remain in the oven—above all, the cook that depends upon the beauty and the delicacy of a frothy trimming to cover a multitude of deficiencies in what is hidden under the crust—has no part in the history of pie.

Beans, and pie and doughnuts, can be a joy, an inspiration. Also they can become a habit. We can be thankful that in most American homes they are a perpetual but income-returning care. But in too many restaurants, where the press of modern life is driving us, they are a mere place on the menu. And everything that becomes a commonplace habit soon needs replacement.

Let's hope the restaurant keepers of America, as well as the home-wives, keep beans and pies and doughnuts up to a standard of construction that will be defiant of age and of fashion.

WILD ROSES

Constance Green in the English Review.

Fashioned that man may know how fair can be
The common things God shapes continually.

Flashed like a mother's cheek when in her heart
Love and its mysteries to-morrow start

Strengthened each perfect leaf with crimson veins,
As if God still could spare time, and great pains.

Treasured as heart of her, she doth unfold
In her sweet secret cup, a summer of gold.

Framed in her sheath of green on a tall spray,
This lovely flower at break of day.

Holding her rose cup up to the sun
Feeling her secrets close when day is done.

Flame when life is past with one last sign,
Lately even to death, her petals lie.

Poisoned that man may know how fair can be
The common things God shapes continually.

If people who are fat and soft can't find any other way to reduce flesh, they might try tramping the street in search of a job.

WEATHER SIGNS

The Weather Prophet is now predicting a hard winter— But he predicted an early frost.

He says the signs and omens all point to a real old fashioned winter— But he predicted the past summer would be cold and disagreeable.

He says all the portents indicate a cruel winter dead ahead— But we may hope he will be 95 per cent wrong again.

Uncommon Sense By John Blake

Brain Poisons

Crimes are not committed by "people with healthy minds."

Before a brain can direct criminal deeds it must become poisoned. Hate, envy, malice and jealousy all are brain poisons, and all deadly ones if permitted to run their course.

The recent killing of a Brooklyn girl by a woman friend was probably directly due to jealousy—a very common emotion, but a very dangerous one.

It has resulted in many murders, and will result in thousands more till the end of time.

Most theft is the result of greed or envy, both deadly poisons to the brain.

Malice, or the desire for revenge will upset any sound mind that dwells too long upon them.

We all experience some of these emotions in some degree. It is human nature. The longer we harbor them the more evil they become.

The law declares that no murder shall be committed in the first degree unless it is accompanied by premeditation.

This is a wise provision. And as a matter of fact most murders of this character are premeditated a long time before they are committed.

Nearly all the notorious assassins of history have brooded over their crimes long before they perpetrated them.

Charlotte Corday, John Wilkes Booth, whose motives for their crimes were widely different, both had poisoned their minds by hatred and malice, before they struck.

Keep these poisons out of your brain.

—Even if they do not lead to crime, which they may readily do, they will make you unlovable and bad friends with the world and people in it.

If you find they are getting a strong hold upon you, use all your effort to throw them off.

The doctor can tell you how to get rid of poisons that creep into your physical system, and perhaps by operation get rid of them.

But there is no antidote for brain poison but common sense, and that you must supply yourself.

The Battle of Ararat

An Appeal by the Fresno Branch of the American-Armenian Students Association for Justice to Armenia

It was a short while before the armistice of the world's war that the battle of Ararat was fought in Palestine. The Armenians, under the command of General Allenby, won the battle.

The battle was won for the Allies. It completed the conquering of the Holy Land, set aside by Great Britain as the national home for the Jewish people. It added glory to the British command, and to General Allenby's army. It carried the purpose and plan of British diplomacy over 150 years old. The battle did not seem to be of international importance, but it had its peculiar value as a basis for international justice.

In the whole world, probably General Allenby was the only one who knew that the battle of Ararat was won almost by a small company of Armenian men, most of whom were trained in the French Legion d'Oranger voluntarily, promptly responding to the earnest appeal of France for men.

These volunteers came mostly from Armenia, with American ideals of independence and justice, liberty and life, live and let live principles. Their pockets were full of American dollars, which they had earned by terrible hard work. They paid their own expenses to and in New York, some of them to France. They were drilled in France, later on in Cyprus, ready to be thrown into Cilicia to cut the communications of General Fakhri Pasha's army of 30,000 Turks.

General Fakhri Pasha intended to rule and go to the relief of Baghdad (ancient Babylon). General Fakhri Pasha could not succeed in raising the Turkish army. The Allies changed their plans and the companies in Cyprus joined General Allenby's army in Palestine. The company of Armenian Volunteers commanded by Shikhanian, educated in American schools, college and university, formed an advance division; and as soon as the command was given to take the aggressive, the Armenian Volunteers were lost. They knew no bounds any more. Many of their kinsmen had fought and fallen around Verdun and other fronts in France, where they were fighting only for world liberty and peace, but in Armenia they were confronted with Turks, the murderers of all they loved ones, the robbers of all they had in the world, the outragers of their honor, the desecrators of their holy churches, the exterminators of their nation; the human beast, meaner than any human mind can imagine. It was no wonder that at the sight of the Turks the Armenian Volunteers melted to madness of vengeance, they rushed on the human beasts, fought with holy madness and fell heroically for the cause of the Allies. History will place and and to their representatives in Congress to do justice to Armenia.

The Armenians today still believe that the better part of American people will raise their voice and demand justice to Armenians. The good Americans have saved by their philanthropy hundreds and thousands of Armenians. Will they let them become objects of basely and most vicious pleasures of bloody Turks again?

Orpheum Season Opens

Hasn't that a good sound? Coming through the low door,
Don't it make you And after a bit of jazzing
Sort of sit up The house will get dark
And take notice like And some pictures will show
To hear that the Orpheum And then the curtain
Will start in this week Will go up
For the same old nights. And so will the lights
And I wonder And Sammy Lee
Will our old friend And his Lady Friends
Mister Caesar Brand Will "Handle with care"
Be leader of the orchestra? The first act
It's going to feel fine Of the new season.
On next Thursday evening There's one fine thing
To tuck the good wife About an Orpheum show
Under the arm That a lot of folks
After a manner of speaking, Never seem to get
And walk slowly down And that is,
To the White theater That all the acts
And meet the old friends Are good acts.
With their old wives— Some may be good
No, no, I don't mean that. In one way
I mean the old friends And some in another,
With the new But they're all good.
Somehow I'm getting myself Some are so good
Into some sort of a pickle. That you can sit there
What I really mean is And be glad you came
The same old friends And after you get home
With the same wives— You can talk about them
Listen, folks, And be glad again,
Let's forget about wives While there are other acts
And figure how pleasant That are so rotten
It's going to be That you sit there
To go to the White And kick and kick
On Thursday evening And when you get home
And meet other folks You keep on kicking
And sit 'in the old seats And those acts are good
And look all around Because they make you like
To see who else is there The good acts better.
And finally get an eye And besides, folks,
On the orchestra These acts help us
Sweeping away down To get some of the kicks
So they won't hump Out of our systems.
The heads of them So you see they're good.

More Truth Than Poetry By James J. Montague

Unseen Perils

If only you knew that an adder
Was writhing right under your chair,
Growing hourly madder and madder
You'd move with a little more care.
A look would spread over your features
Of sudden and horrified fright,
For adders are venomous creatures
And only too likely to bite.

If you should suspect there was prowling
At bed time, around in your room,
A lion whose ominous growling
Predicted your hideous doom,
You hardly would slumber serenely
For lions are full of deceit,
And always are hungering keenly
For live human beings to eat.

If you knew that the sofa could shelter
A tiger that savagely leers,
And means, in a minute to welter
In your life-blood, right up to his ears
You wouldn't sit placidly reading,
For tigers are terrible brutes,
And pay little heed to one's pleading
While plying their deadly pursuits.

Such visions are rather unpleasant—
It harrows the bravest man's soul
When these animals all answer "Present!"
As a wild-eyed small boy calls the roll.
And yet they are all in his power;
You are safe if he's sitting close by
For the terrified man enters cower
At a single black glance from his eye!

ELKS CLUB TO REVIVE PLANS FOR BUILDING

Meeting Will Be Held Next Week on Project
Six Story Structure Is Contemplated By Order

Members of the building committee of the Fresno lodge of Elks will be summoned for a meeting during the coming week to actively revive the project for the erection by the order of a handsome six-story structure on the site adjoining the rooms at present occupied by the lodge on Tulare street.

The announcement that the project, which has been allowed to lie dormant for some time, would again be brought back on the list of important business before local Elks, because of the constant growth of the order and the need for more commodious quarters, was made yesterday by Elliot R. Bradley, exalted ruler.

The lodge some years ago purchased a building site 75 by 125 feet, extending from the alley just east of the Howell building to the building which is now under lease by the Elks.

Plans for the proposed new structure have not been drawn but it is expected the building committee may authorize some such action at its pending meeting.

The building committee is headed by Roy Pulliam as temporary chairman. New officers are to be elected at the forthcoming conference, which is scheduled for a few days after the return of the high delegation of local Elks to the state convention in Santa Cruz.

The Elks winter activities, after the vacation period extending through the latter summer months, are scheduled to begin with tonight's regular lodge session. On the evening of October 12 is scheduled balloting on new members, on October 19 the initiation of a number of candidates and on October 28 regular lodge sessions.

Either on the evening of the initiation or some Saturday date during the month a smoker for the 1200 members of the lodge is in prospect. Owing to the growing coolness of the evenings no more dances are to be held on the roof garden so the entertainment committee is concentrating its efforts on a series of smokers.

TONG MEN UP ON OCTOBER 17

Defense Granted More Time on Case

Because of the association of the law firm of Lindsay & Conley with the defense in the case of the People of the State of California against Wong Kim and Sing Hing, indicted for the murder of Ah Wah on July 11, trial of the case was continued yesterday until October 17 by Judge C. E. Beaumont.

In affidavits presented to the court by the attorneys, they alleged that as there was no transcript of grand jury testimony, and as they had not sufficient time to become aware of the case, they desired to continue the case. The defense was associated in the case on Monday, less than twenty-four hours before the action was set for trial.

Chief counsel for the defense, Lindsay South, in an affidavit presented to the court, stated that considerable delay was necessitated in the case because of his inability to see the defendants without an order of the sheriff, who was out of the city. He stated that as there was no preliminary hearing, he could not become thoroughly conversant with the case.

South also alleged in his affidavit that he has been informed by the defendants that they were not near the scene of the crime on July 11 and that additional time is necessary to produce the witnesses in order to testify to this fact. He stated that he is searching for two witnesses who will testify that the defendants were several miles from the scene of the crime at the time it was alleged to have been committed.

The affidavit also states that there were other Chinese at or near the scene of the crime at the time of its commission.

The murder was committed on the ranch of H. E. Gattcomb on Armstrong avenue near Fowler. Wah was shot four times through the back. The murderers were not seen.

When the crime was investigated by Sheriff W. F. Jones and deputies, they discovered the defendants in a wrecked automobile several miles east of where Lincoln avenue crosses Armstrong avenue. According to the officers, revolvers containing exploded shells of the same caliber as the bullets found in Wah's back were in the possession of the defendants.

The defense in an affidavit contended that they were trying to locate some telephone linemen who, they state, can prove an alibi for the defendants.

District Attorney W. G. Gearhart interposed objections to the continuance stating that the defense had ample time to gather evidence. He later consented, stating that justice could only be done after the defense was ready to present their case. Associated with District Attorney Gearhart on the prosecution are Assistant District Attorney H. J. Carling and Herbert McDowell.

REFUNDING OF TAX DISCUSSED

Supervisors Request An Opinion

Considerable discussion was had yesterday by the board of supervisors on the matter of refunding $400,000 to the county for the refund of the poll tax law, which has been held unconstitutional by the supreme court.

Seven petitions for the refund of the $400,000 have been received by the board. The money collected has been turned over to the unappropriated school fund in accordance with the act. As the act is unconstitutional, the board has authority to draw from this fund the amount of $400,000 to determine whether or not it is within its jurisdiction to refund the money.

The board has asked that the district attorney prepare an opinion stating whether they shall refund the money, or whether it shall be refunded to the superior court of the county. The report will be ready within a few days. Deputy District Attorney Wakefield stated.

SCRIP AUCTION ON NOVEMBER 7

Sale Will Be Held at Sacramento

A public auction sale of state scrip will be held by Surveyor General W. S. Kingsbury at the state capitol, Sacramento, Monday, November 7 at 10 a. m.

State scrip is the cheapest land scrip on the market today. Scrip can be purchased only by citizens of the United States who are residents of the state of California, and can be located on any vacant non-mineral unreserved United States government land in California. The scrip can be used to purchase land through the surveyor general's office and acquire title to the land by the purchase of scrip, by the federal government for public purposes prior to the date the land is surveyed. The applicant need not live on or improve the land.

State scrip is not transferable. Scrip is sold in forty-acre lots for cash, personal checks received, but no purchase can be made from the state, and the surrender of the scrip is payment for an equal acreage of government land.

At the last auction sale of state scrip the prices received averaged $6.57 per acre.

All money received from the sale of state scrip goes to the support of the public schools of the state.

For particular giving information concerning state scrip, address the state surveyor general, Sacramento.

CAR SHORTAGE SERIOUS, SAYS S.P. EXECUTIVE

Deliver 50 Per Cent of Orders for Reefers
Luce States
Eastern Consignees Are Holding Cars, He Declares

The shortage of cars for movement of fresh fruit from the San Joaquin valley has become so serious yesterday that the Southern Pacific was delivering slightly less than fifty per cent of the total number of reefers ordered by shippers, and U. W. Luce, freight traffic manager, was appealing to valley shippers to urge consignees in the east to release cars immediately upon arrival.

The nation of eastern consignees is one of the main causes of the shortage, according to U. W. Luce, division freight and passenger agent, of Fresno. "Cars are standing in eastern tracks because the tariff allows it," said Luce. "The tariff is published at a certain rate, and consignees can keep the cars standing as long as they like so long as they pay for it, while the California fruit shipper suffers because of lack of northern consignees."

For the past four days, including Sunday, Luce says, that the Southern Pacific has been able to fill slightly less than fifty per cent of the orders for reefers. The railroad manager held out little hope of total improvement, although he said yesterday, "conditions look as though they might get better on account of the fall that comes between the time when shipments of melons and muskmelons end and cucumbers begin moving heavily."

The Southern Pacific has issued a statement from its freight traffic manager, C. W. Luce, of San Francisco, covering the car situation, and calling on shippers to urge eastern consignees to release cars as soon as possible. "The statement was given out for publication yesterday by Luce at Fresno."

"Extremely heavy eastward movement of perishable commodities of all kinds, combined with a congested situation in the east caused by the large number of loaded refrigerator cars held at eastern destinations and enroute for disposition and unloading, is causing a serious car shortage," says the statement by Luce.

"Developments in the situation within the week indicate that unless consignees release cars more quickly the congestion will become so great that eastern lines may find it necessary to declare embargoes against grape shipments, which are very heavy at present," says Luce.

"The Southern Pacific company is making every effort to relieve the situation as in the Pacific Fruit Express company, but the shippers should know that the delay on the part of eastern consignees in unloading and releasing the cars is a factor that is being found difficult to overcome."

"The grape shipments this year are much heavier than last. Within the last 27 days, 10,458 cars of grapes have been shipped out of California, as compared with 7,245 cars during the same period of 1920."

John Rorden, Park Ostrich Lays Egg; New Name Wanted

John Rorden, has laid an egg which proves that Loretta Park and Ostrich Park are one and the same. Whatever they may know about ostriches, know little about eggs. When the recent addition to the park was made, in the center of a fine upstanding ostrich, Loretta and Ostrich went out and solemnly christened the bird in honor of their old friend from Selma.

Now the bird has laid an egg. Yesterday at the meeting of the park commission, Rorden, showed up with a brown paper sack, which he had fully opened to disclose the contents as a fine, large ostrich egg.

And Rorden and Loretta are so proud of their bird's ability that they have forgotten to be sure any more with Selma for exposing their ignorance on ostrich matters.

What is wanted now, is a name that will fit the ostrich and the circle in to Charles Rorden, care park commission, city hall.

EDDIE HEARNE BREAKS SPRING IN TRACK HOLE

Claims It Would Not Throw Car Off
Speedway
Drivers Declare Local Track Is Safest in Country

Eddie Hearne, one of the contestants in the automobile race of last Saturday, discovered yesterday morning that he had broken a spring when he hit the hole on the south end of the track where Alton Spaulding was killed. In hitting the hole, however, Hearne declares that the car had no effect on his driving, and that his car did not over.

He accused the theory that the cause of Spaulding's death was from hitting the hole at that place. "It is absurd to claim that hitting the hole would cause the accident," Hearne claimed. "I will volunteer to go out any time, drive through the hole at a faster clip than Spaulding was making, and prove that the car will not be diverged from the course a bit."

"The reason for Spaulding's accident is apparent. It was from careless driving, and once during the race I nearly met the same fate. In coming around the curve at too high a rate of speed the car will skid, throwing the rear part up higher than the front, and causing the machine to plunge down toward the apron of the track."

"Spaulding then saw that he was about to hit the hole, and instead of hitting it, tried to straddle it, leaving the hole open to the center of his machine. This caused him to hit the apron, and once you do this, the car will either turn over or must be straightened out by turning the wheel to bring it up on the curve again."

"Trying to drive on the ribbon at that speed is similar to making a sharp curve at a rate of 100 miles an hour. Spaulding chose to straighten out, and as he did he turned his wheels too sharply, and in an instant was over the fence."

Other Drivers Agree
"I had the same experience as Spaulding," said one of the drivers. "I managed to give it a second try, but I was standing up in the bank. A moment later, and I would have been sharing a like fate."

Joe Thomas, who was up for his first time yesterday, and Jimmy Murphy, who was preparing to leave for Colton with Hearne, stated positively that Hearne's version was the real one, and the only one that could be based upon a scientific theory.

"The Fresno track is the safest one in the country," Murphy said. "It is superior to Colton, Beverly Hills, Tacoma, Indianapolis and Uniontown tracks. The boys have all felt that without mechanical trouble and foolish driving, there would never be a serious accident on the track. Spaulding was known as a most dapper and reckless sort of chap, and we drivers often cautioned him to drive more carefully for his own benefit, and for our protection."

Joe Thomas stated that he had driven over the Uniontown track and that he had dropped into worse holes than the one in the local track. He stated that under no circumstances did he ever lose control of his machine.

The trio further stated that it is apparent that something happened to Spaulding's car before it started to drive down the track toward the hole. Examination of the car shows that the steering apparatus is in perfect shape even now. The cause of the car skidding was due presumably to a blow to the rear or to excessive speed, they declare.

Upon bidding Manager H. E. Patterson of the speedway good-bye, Hearne and Murphy offered to sign entry blanks for the next race, and told him they would be willing to race on the track as it is now, with no repairs being made. Thomas likewise.

Delegates to Hi-Y Meet to Be Named

The conference committee of the Hi-Y club of the Fresno high school will meet at the Y. M. C. A. at dinner this evening to appoint an executive committee which will choose delegates to attend the annual meeting of the Hi-Y clubs at Stockton November 4, 5 and 6.

The annual conference of the club, at Stockton will be attended by clubs north of Bakersfield. The local club will send ten delegates to the conference.

Arthur Morrison, vice president of the club, will act as chairman of the meeting. Roy Niswander will be secretary.

Thomas was up yesterday for the first time. He will remain in Fresno for a couple of weeks. He is forced to have his arm bathed in water of 120 degrees each hour to completely kill the blood poisoning. He expects to drive to Colton in his car, the machine which Earl Cooper drove to victory in the local race.

Upon bidding Manager H. E. Patterson of the speedway good-bye, Hearne and Murphy offered to sign entry blanks for the next race, and told him they would be willing to race on the track as it is now, with no repairs being made. Thomas likewise.
